

Did you know that red light does not reach ocean depths, so deep-sea animals that are red actually appear black and thus are less visible to predators and prey?

